In this document, we're keeping track of our brainstorming ideas as we go along.  Make sure to include a brief explanation of why the group chose to go with it or not.

Just remember, not all the ideas from brainstorming will end up in the final product. This is just a record of our thought process. No idea is too silly, and every thought has value, so make sure to write them down.

- Home screen featuring various buttons.
- Extra confidentiality: individual accounts for each client.
- To-do list: a planned schedule of tasks and responsibilities for each member. (logged-in user)
- Agenda alongside the 'To-do list'. (logged-in user)
- Admin should have the ability to modify the agenda.
- Attendance list in which the clients can indicate their availability using red (unavailable) or green (available), which updates the to-do list. (logged-in user)
- Anonymous complaint button which sends complaints to a textbox to store it. Three sections – one for a potential client, one for the task, and one for the room that wasn't completed.
- Public and private complaints.
- House rules tab which allows the owner to edit the rules.
- Login system: QR-login.
- If the admin is logged-in, a button to edit house rules/contact information is accessible.
- Inventory menu: updateable with new items.
- Encourage sharing of complaints and compliments for open communication.
- View complaints (public and private).
- Track the number of complaints per client so the admin can monitor for any necessary action.

Complaints go as follows:

1. Tenant signs into their account.
2. Tenant clicks on the complaint button.
3. Tenant can enter complaint details, name the problematic tenant, specify incomplete tasks, and mention the affected room.
4. Tenant can choose the visibility of the complaint: admin-only, admin and the problematic tenant, or everyone.
5. Tenant submits the complaint.
6. A "View Complaints" button allows users to choose between viewing public or private complaints.
7. Public complaints display issues related to incomplete tasks and problematic rooms.
8. Private complaints show grievances specifically referencing the tenant in question as the cause of the problem.
